Political Pot Is Simmering

BUNCH OF CANDIDATES HOLD SWAY AT MEETING IN OCEAN BEACH

Considering unforeseen counter events last Monday night, there was a good-sized and quite representative crowd in attendance at the special meeting called by the O. B. chamber of commerce in the Congregational building on De Foe street. Final plans for the children's playground were discussed and a revised petition was presented by Tom Deering, executive secretary of the San Diego Community Service, who also displayed several comprehensive maps and fully and clearly elucidated the proposition for a fine community center, details of which are given in another column. Mayor Bacon also made a happy talk, particularly stressing the importance of the playground and civic center project, petitions for which are now being circulated in the Beach district.

Enthusiasm for the Library bonds was greatly augmented in a splendidly sincere speech by Miss Althea Warren, city librarian, who outlined the wonderful growth of the O. B. Branch Library and the urgent necessity for larger, better and more conveniently situated quarters. Her telling remarks were heartily applauded. Register and vote for the Library Bonds.

City Manager Fred Rhodes was present and was asked to put in a good word for the proposed improvements, which he did very satisfactorily besides answering several suggestions about water, lights, sewers, paving and other local needs. Then the meeting was turned over to a big bunch of candidates who are seeking election or re-election in the current campaign. Those present who accepted the invitation for brief talks concerning their candidacy included (for mayor) Fred A. Heilbron, M. W. Robbins, Dr. Kinsley; (for council) Ed. L. Head, H. K. Weitzel, Virgil Bruschi, A. C. Baker, Frank Geer; (for board of education) Miss Julia Pickett and S. H. Hostetter, all of whom were accorded respectful attention and given warm applause for an assortment of promises toward promoting the welfare of this great Beach section of San Diego.

ROBERT BELDING DISAPPEARED FROM HOME TWO YEARS AGO

Anxious, broken-hearted parents back in Corry, Pennsylvania, are awaiting news of their lost son, Robert Belding, who disappeared at the age of fifteen from his home in March, 1923. Young Belding was last heard of at Fort Lorraine, Wyoming, in December, 1923, and a California friend of the family has asked us to broadcast the search for him through "The Beach News," in the 39 states and three countries embraced in our list of subscribers. It is stated that Robert Belding was a good boy and no reason can be assigned for his sudden leave of home, and his continuous silence as to his whereabouts. He is described as being about five feet, six inches in height, solidly and squarely built, with dark brown hair and very dark brown eyes. He has a small V shaped scar near the right side of his mouth. Any message concerning him can be addressed to his father, A. H. Belding, lock box 208, Corry, Penna.

GEO. FINLEY BEGINS BUILDING OF FINE RESIDENCE FOR JOHN FREY

A permit was secured by Contractor George Finley last Wednesday for the construction of a fine frame house for John Frey at 4591 Brighton avenue. It will cost $4,000 and will be modern in every particular. Forms are being laid for concrete foundations and the new residence will be an ornament to that rapidly growing section.

BOOST for an O. B. Civic Center WHOLE O. B. BLOCK TO BE ACQUIRED BY SCHOOL BOARD

It is stated that the board of education at its meeting last Monday night declared its intention of purchasing several lots adjoining the Ocean Beach school grounds. The lots are included in the block bordered by Santa Monica, Newport and DeFoe streets.

All four of FABER'S Grocery Stores will be closed all day next Monday Washington birthday.

"THE TORNADO" WILL HIT OCEAN BEACH NEXT MID-WEEK

Manager Ray Ericsson announces an extra night's show next Monday (Washington's birthday) when Viola Dana and Tom Moore will appear in "Rough Lips," repeating Sunday night's performance together with Alberta Vaughan and the "Go-Getters." The big special for the mid-week will be "The Tornado," a remarkably thrilling picture with House Peters in the leading role. "The Uninvited Guest" comes next Friday and Saturday with an all-star cast.

REMARKABLE RECORD SHOWS A PERMIT A DAY FOR OCEAN BEACH

For the first month of the new year, a check-up of the building permits obtained for Ocean Beach construction work from Jan. 1 up to Feb. 3, shows the remarkable average of 34 permits in 34 days and totaling way over $34,000. That's a mighty fine showing as a sort of pre-spring building boom. This average of a thousand dollars a day in building improvements, kept up here throughout the year, will mean a wonderful increase in the prosperity, appearance and population of this thriving Beach district.

S. D. A. & N. Academy

The recent presentation of "A Night in Boyland," a five-act play by the Junior school department of the academy, under direction of Mrs. W. C. Atkinson, proved an enjoyable affair. A Scout play, "The Tenderfoot," added to the amusement of the evening.

Considerable interest is being shown by cadets in the Sea Scout movement. Lieut. J. N. McNulty, head of the naval reserve; Elwood Barley, head of the Boy Scouts, and Mr. Shriever of the Army and Navy Y. M. C. A., spoke to the cadets at a recent chapel meeting.

PERMIT GRANTED FOR BUSINESS BUILDING ON VOLTAIRE STREET LINE

The controversy over an application by M. F. Heller for a special permit to erect a store building flush with the property line on Voltaire street ended last Monday when the city council granted a special permit for the construction of the building on the lines originally planned. Some residents protested against the permit on the grounds that Voltaire street is a residential street, and that others buildings are set back a full 15 feet. Other property owners argued that Voltaire street is rapidly becoming a business street and that buildings should be built up to the street by all who desire. The city planning commission recommended the granting of a special permit.

Ocean Beach Civic Center

The Plan—To provide a Civic Center for Ocean Beach, embracing the two blocks between DeFoe and Ebers streets and between Newport and Saratoga avenues, and to include school, park, playground, library, auditorium—a complete Community Center.

Why This Site—1. The Community Service is working with every neighborhood in the city with the object of creating a Civic Center at each elementary school. 2. The Harmon Foundation is providing $2000 for the Ocean Beach Playground requires that it be located adjoining the school property. 3. The Board of Education agreed to provide $1700 for the improvement of the property, and to take charge of it if located adjoining the school. 4. Mr. John Nolen and other eminent city planners and recreation leaders throughout the country have commented most favorably on the school as the proper location for the Civic Center.

Why doesn't the School Board purchase the land?—1. There are 32 elementary schools each of which needs a Civic Center but naturally if they are to procure such they must do something to help themselves. 2. The Board of Education as its part toward the development of the Ocean Beach Civic Center has agreed that if the district purchases the block adjoining the school it will provide $1,700.00 to put the land in condition as a playground and further that it will purchase the seventeen lots in block 32, in which the school is located, insofar as there lots and the several houses thereon may be procured at a reasonable appraisal.

Why not locate the Library separately?—Miss Althea Warren, City Librarian, at a public meeting in Ocean Beach explained that the Library Board after thoroughly considering the matter decided unanimously in favor of the Ocean Beach Branch on the Civic Center site, if the arrangement could be made. The location is considered most central from the library standpoint and it has been found from experience that at least half of the library service is for the children, and that a location in conjunction with the school results in much greater service to the general community than when the school and library are separate.

The purchase of the block adjoining the school is necessary to provide for the needs of the school.

The Outdoor Recreation Congress, called by the President last May, adopted eight acres as the minimum standard for elementary schools. If the balance of the land in the block in which the school is now located is procured along with the entire block adjoining, as contemplated the total land area will be slightly more than seven acres. There are more than 400 children at the Ocean Beach School. The development of good character and the making of good citizens of these boys and girls is to a very large degree dependent upon the provision of wholesome play under competent leadership.

Ocean Beach needs this Civic Center as its Community Headquarters—There can not be much community spirit unless there is a community home. This Civic Center would furnish a place where everyone in the community could go and feel that it belonged to them. Ultimately it should be developed so that there would be activities for every member of the family. Mothers and fathers, young men and women, and boys and girls would all find interesting activities at this center and everyone, rich or poor, would feel that they possessed an equal share. It is planned to beautify the area of civic center by the inclusion of park features with a border of trees and shrubs around the entire parking strip of the complete blocks.

The Cost—As there are about 6500 lots in Ocean Beach and the amount of the bond issue to be called for is $20,000 the proportion per lot only, average something like three dollars. The cost of the Civic Center to the people of Ocean Beach is only a pittance compared to what the cost would be a few years hence when the land would be covered with buildings. The expense to each property owner now will be returned many fold in the added value of Ocean Beach property and in the added attractiveness of Ocean Beach as a place in which to live and bring up children, because of this beautiful civic center geographically located in the very center of the beach district.

TOURIST'S WEEKLY PASS COVERING ENTIRE CITY NOW IN FORCE

Officials of the San Diego Electric railway announce the issuance of a new weekly pass, costing $1.50 and covering the entire city. It is called the "tourist's excursion pass" and will continue in effect until April 15th. The new pass will entitle purchasers to transportation on all ferries, all points south of Mission Beach, Redondo court, including Ocean Beach, La Playa, Ramona's home, Coronado, Chula Vista, National City and San Diego city limits, inner and outer zones. The pass will be good for seven days, Monday to Sunday night.

O. B. LIBRARY

MARGARET RANKIN, Librarian

"Globe-Trotting at Home," is the subject of the poster exhibit at the O. B. Branch Library this week. The following books will be enjoyed: "Happy Traveler," Tatchell; "Through Spain and Portugal," Peirotto; "On the Gorilla Trail," Bradley; "Canada," Carpenter; "Tail of the Hemisphere, Chile and Argentina," Carpenter; "Hawaii, Past and Present," Castle; "Great White South," Ponting; "Beachcomber in the Orient," Foster; "Lost Kingdom of Burgundy," Casey; "Guardians of the Columbia," Williams; "Old English Towns," Andrews; "Casual Wanderings in Ecuador," Niles; "Switzerland," Fox; "A Wayfarer in China," Kendall; "India, Old and New," Chirrol.

Every one in Ocean Beach is working for the Library bonds, to be voted on March 24. Registration closes Feb. 21. Now every booster must inform his friends in other parts of San Diego which are not in the districts to be benefited, state our need and in that way gain an extra vote. Remember every extra vote over the two-thirds cast in O. B. will cancel a negative vote vast in a community which is not benefited. San Diego has never spent a dollar of city money for Library buildings. This bond issue of $60,000 will be paid for by all of S. D. On a property valuation of $3,000 there will only be 10 cents the first year and less the following years. Vote for the Library Bonds March 24.

OCEAN BEACH CLUB

WALLOPS THE FARMERS

In an old-fashioned slugging bee the local team put it all over the Edgemoor Farm nine last Sunday on the Ocean Beach diamond by a score of 9 to 1. Our own Joe Rainent smashed a homer in the third inning, with two runners on the bases, and then the fun began. The visitors used two pitchers, while Warburton kept 'em guessing.

JOLLY "TACKY" PARTY

DANCE AND MAKE MERRY IN NEW BATHHOUSE

An informal pre-view of the palatial new natatorium at Mission Beach was enjoyed by happy hundreds last Saturday night when the Silver Crescent club gave a Valentine "Tacky" dance on the floor of the great white-tiled plunge. It was a most inspiring sight. The magnificent interior of the most mammoth bathhouse in California glistened under batteries of spotlights and the visitors and dancers marveled at the beauty and novelty of the surroundings. The girls' club comprised of employees of the Spreckels company, were accorded this early use of the plunge as a compliment by Claus Spreckels, president and general manager of the Mission Beach company, which built the mammoth bathhouse and is building other structures in the amusement center and carrying on a vast development program throughout Mission Beach.

Among the officials of the Mission Beach company who participated in the informal inspection and pre-view festivities were: Neil E. Brown, assistant general manager of the Mission Beach company; George L. Barney and Thomas A. Rife, sales managers; Edward J. Burns, assistant general manager of the San Diego Electric railway company which has assured adequate transportation with its high speed double track beach line, and J. Wilber Kyle, manager of the bathhouse, who served as master of ceremonies for the Silver Crescent club dance in the same able manner that he has conducted unnumbered swimming meets.

COUNCILMAN HEILBRON

RECOGNIZED AS AUTHORITY ON CIVIC MATTERS

The people of San Diego, by overwhelmingly voting the El Capitan bonds, placed a mandate into the hands of the responsible city officials to proceed with the program of water development so emphatically indorsed at that election, and the carrying out of that program should be entrusted to the men who have consistently fought for El Capitan, according to a statement issued by business men urging the election of Councilman Fred A. Heilbron as mayor. It is pointed out that Heilbron, during his six years in the city council, has been one of the foremost exponents of an intelligent program of water development, and has constantly had in mind the development of the San Diego river as one of the city's future sources of supply.

"Probably no one in San Diego is more conversant with the water question than Councilman Fred A. Heilbron," is the statement received by "The Beach News," and it is further said that "during the six years he has been in the public service he has given much study to this all-important subject, and has consistently maintained that the future growth and prosperity of San Diego is limited only by the volume of water available."

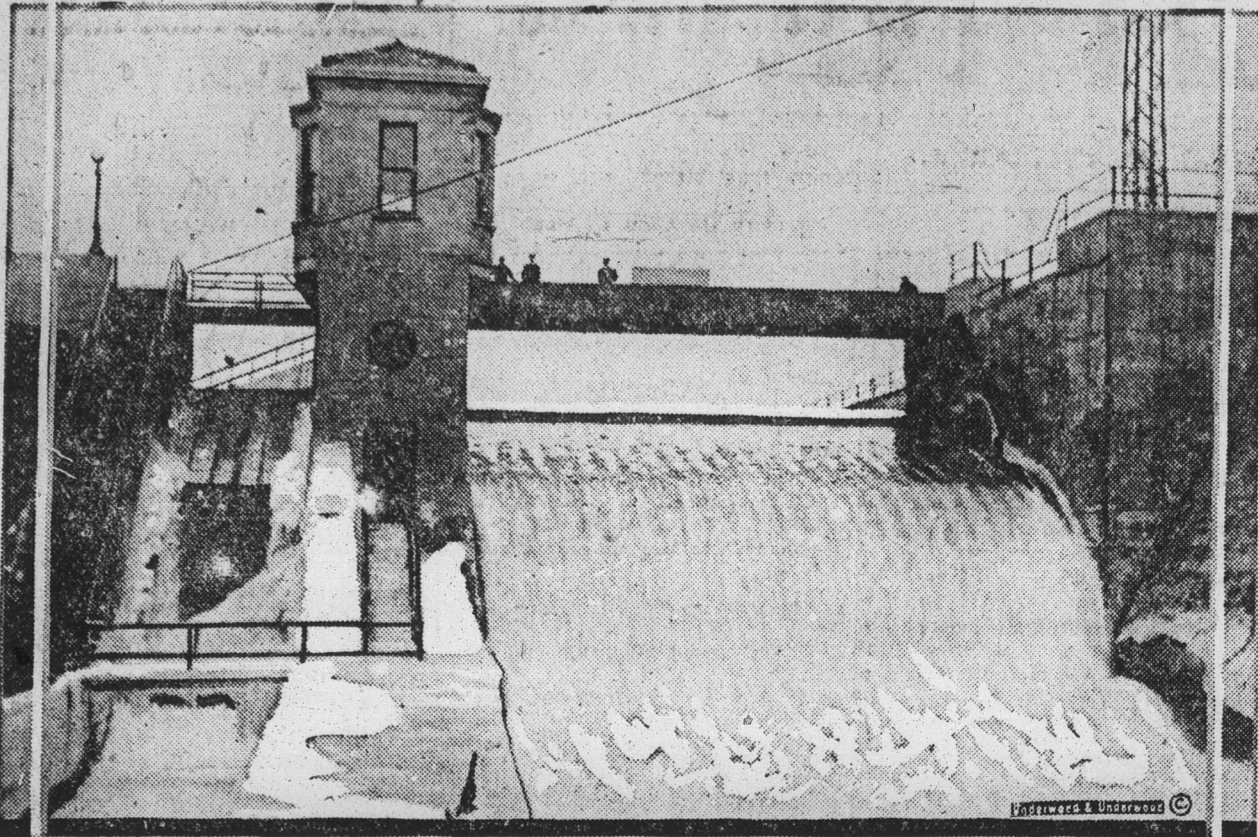

Councilman Heilbron is generally acknowledged to be most eminently fitted for the position of mayor by reason of his thorough knowledge of the city's many needs, of which water is only one, and also because of the fact that he is one of the city's successful and substantial business men.

LIGHTING UP BUSINESS

During evening business hours lights are beginning to brighten Newport avenue here and there. The latest illumination has been furnished by Cecil O. Carl for the place conducted by "Gus" next door to the Ocean Theatre and consists of a string of twenty-three alternate red, white and blue lights over the entire entrance. There is promise of other commercial houses following suit in the line of lighting exteriors.

Heyl Reweighing the Universe

Dr. Paul R. Heyl, physicist at the United States bureau of standards, has decided to weigh the earth, the sun, moon and stars. He is making his tests in a dark cave 35 feet beneath the basement of the bureau of standards. He has suspended two accurately weighed gold balls from the end of an aluminum bar, which in turn is suspended by a light wire that allows the apparatus to rotate. Thus the balls follow a circular course much like the orbit of the earth in its rotation around the sun. The apparatus is being operated by Dr. Heyl from another room in order not to affect the experiment by the heat from the body.

Circuit Sure to Be Satisfactory

Good Coupler and Low-Loss Variable Condenser Are Needed.

How often have you wished that your receiving set would cut out a certain station nearby which was interfering with a program you were trying to hear? Selectivity in the radio set depends upon two essentials—parts and hookup.

Of course, every radio fan knows that he should select only the material which is of the highest grade, especially the variable condensers and variocoupler.

With a good coupler and a low-loss variable condenser the accompanying circuit will fulfill the wants of the most exacting radio fan. A variocoupler with a 180-degree secondary is required.

Fifty-Two Turns on Primary.

The primary of the coupler should have about fifty-two turns, with a tap on the tenth turn. This tap is connected to the ground binding post on the panel. The upper end turn of the primary connects to the aerial as well as the .00025 grid condenser.

The lower and upper ends of the coupler primary are shunted with a .0005 variable condenser. The rotor plates of this condenser connect to the lower end of the coil and the filament battery.

The stationary plates connect to the grid condenser and the top of the coil. The grid condenser of .00025 mfd. ca-capacity is wired close to the grid terminal in the socket. In this way "hand capacity" is reduced to a minimum.

Diagram for Hooking Up Low-Loss Regenerative Receiver.

Try Tickler Two Ways.

The rotor of the coupler which is connected in the plate circuit of the detector tube should have about thirty-five turns of wire on it. It will be necessary to try the rotor or "tickler" leads in both directions.

One direction will not allow the set to regenerate, while the other direction will result in an increase in volume as the rotor is turned.

The plate circuit also comprises the ear phones, high-voltage B battery and the phone condenser. The latter is a small fixed condenser of .001 or .002 mfd., which is shunted around the phones and B battery. This acts as a by-pass, giving better signal strength.

In tuning the set the variable condenser is employed to cover the wavelength range, while the rotor coil increases or decreases the volume. Any type of tube will work in this circuit.

Of course, the tubes operating from storage battery current will give better signal strength than the dry cell tube, and hence the former type is recommended.—Chicago Daily Journal.

How Pigtail Leads Will

Increase Efficiency

Pigtail connections are just as desirable and necessary for a condenser as for a variometer or variocoupler. In many condensers the rotor shaft makes contact by rubbing against a little brass or copper strip to which a screw or binding post is attached for making connections.

After a period of use the point where the contact is made becomes black, as you can verify by looking at your own condenser if you are using the ordinary type. This black coating prevents the rotor shaft from making good electrical contact with the brass or copper strip, and thus greatly cuts down the efficiency of the condenser.

However, it is easy enough to make your own pigtail connections for your condensers. Get a piece of insulated litzendraht wire, or the small flexible leads sold at all radio stores for making battery connections, and cut off a piece about two inches long.

Clean off the edge of the rotor shaft where it makes contact with the brass strip and solder one end of the flexible lead to this cleaned part of the rotor shaft.

The other end of the two-inch lead is then soldered to the screw or binding post used for connections to other parts of the set. This completes the "pigtail" and will greatly increase the efficiency of the condenser.

In many cases the pressure of the contact strip against the rotor shaft serves also to keep the rotor plates properly spaced between the stator plates. If this is the case, the brass strip should not be removed, but should be used in conjunction with the pigtail connection.

Wavemeter Handy Instrument

Included in the experimenter's list of apparatus should be a good wavemeter. This is just as true in the case of the experimenter who limits his work to receiving apparatus as to the man who goes in for research work on both receiving and transmitting equipment. Keep one handy and it will help you in designing your new coils or choosing the right size of condensers for use with the right size coils.

Community Building

Well to Provide Now for Future of City

American cities, with their present rapid growth and the increasing demand for homes away from the crowded section, are constantly breaking over their boundary lines and overflowing into new territory. The march of an urban population into the region still under the township authority brings some large problems. Haphazard development of the outlying territories, plots laid out without reference to the way in which they conform to the city's plan of arterial streets, residence lots parceled out far from water and sewer connections, hampering of the semi-urban territory by legal restrictions as to township expenditure framed to meet the needs of a purely rural township, these are some of the growing pains of suburban territories.

The creation of metropolitan areas, or districts, is the device which modern cities have evolved to aid in the adjustment of these difficulties. The National Association of Real Estate Boards will undertake a study of how far American cities have devised successful plans for the development of suburban territories through metropolitan areas and will hold a national round-table discussion of subdividers looking to the encouragement of workable plans and toward the spread of such methods of subdivision development as will make for sound and healthy city growth.

Start Drive to Clean Up City's Back Yard

"Let's clean up our back yard."

That's the cry of the industrial development committee of the Cleveland Real Estate board which is planning a campaign which has for its purpose the "sprucing up" of those sections of industrial plants visible to the casual passer-through on the railroads.

The cleanup movement offers various advantages. First, the chance to do some very effective advertising for itself by presenting a good appearance to those passing through on trains. Second, it advertises Cleveland.

In some cities where such a movement has been undertaken, attractive planting along the right-of-way has been made a part of the campaign.

The American Railway Development association has passed a resolution pledging its co-operation in the realtor movement for spruce and business-like appearance in industrial areas. Individual railroads are co-operating through their development departments.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Must Look to Future

I've always believed that city planning was unworthy of the name unless it provided for the future of the city in question and therefore really came under the heading of regional planning, writes Myron H. West, president of the American Park Builders.

The first city to take advantage of the new law regarding the sections outside municipalities was Decatur, which caused to be prepared a comprehensive city and regional plan providing for the plotting of 16,000 acres in addition to the 4,000 acres contained within the city limits. This extended area will take off an added population of 100,000.

I believe that the very foundation of city planning lies in comprehensive zoning and in street control, as made possible under the recent Illinois act.

Citizens Must Be Alert

Concern with the problem of city government is not confined to students of municipal affairs. It is shared by the people of the cities. Those who must bear the burden of city government in the payment of taxes are beginning to realize their chief hope for the future lies in more economical and efficient administration of their affairs. It would be a wholesome change if there should come the realization, too, that whatever the system of government, a persistent and alert public interest in its administration is necessary to effective results.—Exchange.

Group Aids Beauty

As a general rule, more beauty and dignity is the result of planting a group of one kind of tree instead of mixing them. I am not here speaking about forest or woodland planting, but about planting along our highways. Where the adjacent landscape is not interesting, the roadside picture would be enhanced by a promiscuous planting of trees, not in a formal line, but in a scattered way, so that you meet many trunks in place for a lane of trees, shutting off the view of the adjoining country.—Exchange.

Lawn's Proper Setting

Concerning borders that add to the appearance of the lawn, Successful Farming says: "A hardy border of shrubs and perennial plants gives a beautiful setting to a well-kept lawn, and in this border flowers may be had in bloom the entire summer by a judicious selection. Hardy bulbs may be had in bloom with the very earliest shrubbery and these will be followed by the peonies, lilies, and summer flowering bulbs and perennials, while fall blooming plants carry on until frost.

True Friends

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

THE GREAT-HEARTED

ONLY the great-hearted can be true friends.

All along the shadowed ways of life, the great-hearted are constantly sending out sunlight and cheer, which humans of inferior natures can never know or bestow.

To do good, without having their motives suspected, is their grand intention. They seek no praise.

They move about with a quiet of summer breezes, leaving in their trail the delicious scent of gardens and the peace of tranquil skies.

In the happiness they give to others, they find a gratification rich beyond price. If but once in your life you should be fortunate enough to meet a great-hearted man or woman, the remembrance of it will linger in your mind until the end of your days.

Great hearts often dwell in lowly places.

Sometimes they are found in frail bodies poorly clad, but there is about them a radiance of spirit brighter than a thousand stars and clear as the beaming of the noonday sun.

Have You This Habit?

By Margaret Morison

FOOLISH QUESTIONS

POLLY and Molly at thirty decided that farming would satisfy their souls; so they took agricultural courses and started in on milk. Their experiment was a year old when Faith Green went to visit the model plant. Above all things Polly and Molly were scientific, and running their farm on a business basis; and they were very serious in their attitude. For a day after Faith's arrival, things went smoothly. Finally she was taken to see the cow stable. She was specially interested in a few-weeks-old calf, and on coming out she asked admiringly if a big ball of milk standing near the separator were all from the calf.

That question seemed to start the flow going. Next she wanted to know what Polly and Molly did when their spring froze over. A coldness had begun to settle on the party when Faith, who had discovered an old hornet's nest in her attic room, asked if hornets stung in the winter. That was too much for Polly and Molly, and they told her to try and see.

Faith left a day or so before her visit was up, and her two friends heard nothing further than her bread-and-butter letter from her until the winter was nearly over. Then they learned that Faith Green was engaged. They were glad for her, but couldn't help wondering what her husband would do with her habit of foolish questions. Then Polly was asked to spend a week in town.

Faith immediately arranged a party for Polly to meet her fiancé. Faith was obviously happy, and her fiancé obviously in love. Polly had begun to decide that Faith's pose of the human interrogation point had been shed, when the conversation turned to politics. Immediately Faith began plunging, and Polly saw a look of controlled disgust come over the face of the young man beside her friend. Evidently this was an old experience. "How can you tell you're voting for the right man," Faith wanted to know.

Great hearts blow to flame the spark that blazes with love; they espouse Truth and Mercy; they sing from morn till night of kindness and good will, when their days are lonely and their tables are bare.

They are neither silent nor neglectful when the ill and the discouraged need succor or sympathy.

Meek or lowly they are the ministering angels from heaven, carrying to the sorrowing "good tidings of great joy."

From idle slumbers, they call youth and point the way to honor and fame; from the valley of gloom, they bid the despondent to look up to the glorious heavens.

They sin as we all sin, but unlike most of us, they are charitable towards all mankind, prayerful, watchful, faithful.

When the chimes in the belfry chant their evening hymns, no souls on earth are more serenely peaceful than the great-hearted; when at the setting sun of their life the streams of light grow dim in the golden west, and the somber shadows fall all about them, no souls on earth are happier than they, or more eager to go.

FOR THE SAME GIRL

"when, if your ballot is cast for the defeated candidate, it's wasted?"

That crisis, however, was safely passed, and the group began to discuss marriage. Then Faith turned to the only divorced lady among them and said: "I don't see how one knows a man will make a good husband without being married to him for a while. How did you find out, Mrs. Black?"

When Polly went back to the farm and told Molly about Faith's party, Molly said: "Oh, didn't you know—the engagement has been broken? I heard in a letter just yesterday." Faith's fiancé had decided that the habit of foolish questions was one that would grow, not decrease, with age.

HIS AWKWARD WAY

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

HE WAS rather awkward, he wasn't so polite; He was wrong in company. Oftener than right. His intentions, though, were good. People used to say, And he did the best he could, In his awkward way.

Many things he didn't know, Things you learn in school; People said he wasn't, though, Anybody's fool. He just used his common sense— He could even pray For the help of Providence, In his awkward way.

Though he wasn't very smart, Everybody said, Still he had an honest heart, Had a level head. Never reckless, never rash, Saving day by day, That is how he got his cash, In his awkward way.

Certain people used to smile, Thought him rather rough; But the children all the while Liked him well enough. Babies always went to him— He knew how to play, Understood each little whim, In his awkward way.

When the station agent died, Leaving not a thing, To the widow people tried Sympathy to bring. He could think of nothing then, Not a thing to say, But he made her take a ten, In his awkward way.

I don't know just what was his creed, But I often heard 'Twas religion of the deed. Rather than the word. Heaven isn't for the sharp— I expect today He is playing on a harp, In his awkward way.

Mother's Cook Book

I don't like to talk to people who always agree with me. It is amusing to coquette with an echo for a while, but one soon tires of it.—Carlyle.

GOOD THINGS WE LIKE

MOST of us stuff peppers when they are plentiful and in the markets, and when they are scarce and high use them as a garnish and flavor for various dishes; that is about the usual use; as a vegetable they are not well known.

Green Pepper Soup.

Wash and remove the seeds from six green peppers. Cut in pieces, then cook in boiling water, adding salt at the last. Drain, reserving a pint of the pepper liquor. Put the peppers through a sieve and add to the pepper stock. Melt five tablespoonfuls of butter in a kettle, add five tablespoonfuls of flour and stir until well blended. Add the puree with three cupfuls of milk, two teaspoonfuls of salt and one-eighth of a teaspoonful of pepper, stirring constantly. When smooth and creamy sprinkle with paprika and serve.

Creamed Cabbage, Green Peppers. Shred fine a medium-sized head of cabbage. Cook in boiling water until nearly tender and add salt; when tender, drain. Meanwhile prepare six green peppers by washing, then place them over the direct heat and toast them, turning often to prevent burning. Scrape off the blistered skin, holding the pepper under water. Remove the seeds and cut with scissors into long strips. Melt three tablespoonfuls of butter in a deep frying pan, add the peppers and three tablespoonfuls of flour, stir well and add gradually three cupfuls of milk. Cover and simmer for fifteen minutes, or until the peppers are cooked. Then add the cooked cabbage with two teaspoonfuls of salt and one-fourth of a teaspoonful of pepper. Serve at once.

Daked Apple Compote.

Pare, quarter and core four large apples. Place in the bottom of a buttered dish a thin layer of cake crumbs or sweet biscuit crumbs. On top of this place a layer of apples, sprinkle with sugar, dust with cinnamon or nutmeg. Over this place a layer of sliced banana and repeat, using a large cupful of orange juice or sweet cranberry juice. Cover with a layer of crumbs and bake until the fruit is tender. Serve with a hard sauce if served hot. A sprinkling of nuts over the bananas will improve the flavor.

EDITORIAL

IMPROVING CONDITIONS

More active participation in every public move, an intelligent vote in every primary, a realization that every broken law is a personal assault on the national life, would greatly improve social and political conditions in our country, our city and our community.

WHOLE NATION MAY HEAR

It is announced that the inaugural ceremonies, March 4, will be broadcast by a chain of stations scattered across the continent so that every nook and corner of the United States will be in tune with Washington.

Forty stations will be linked together by telephone wires, breaking all records for interconnection between broadcasters.

When President Harding was inaugurated in 1921, the public address system was employed enabling the crowd of 125,000 which filled the plaza and overflowed into the park to hear his voice.

Think of the wonderful advancement during the short period of four years! President Coolidge's voice will be carried to a national audience of 25,000,000.

FRISCO CHINESE

TURN RADIO FANS

San Francisco's Chinatown, which, according to "Nick Carter," once was a maze of underground tunnels, has changed its ways. Now this Celestial section of the city holds the record for having more radio aerials to the block than any other part of the city. Today, in one square of Chinatown there are twenty-three radio aerials and, the district over, the picturesque Oriental roofs are a maze of these wires.

The elder Chinese prefer the radio concerts, as it is difficult for them to understand radio talks, but their boys and girls, all of whom attend American schools, are keen for these talks and rapidly interpret them for the benefit of their elders.

CROSS-WORD PUZZLES

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "Horizontal" defines a word which will fill all the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "Vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below.
No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

KEEPING WELL

SAVE THE BABY'S NECK

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

STAMPING out tuberculosis is saving our babies' necks.

Tuberculosis may affect any part of the body. In former years, tuberculosis of the lungs was called consumption, because the lung tissue was consumed or destroyed, and great cavities formed in these organs.

Tuberculosis of the skin was called lupus, or wolf, because the skin became reddish brown, like a wolf's coat.

Tuberculosis of the glands was called scrofula. In England, it was for centuries called King's Evil, because it was believed that it could be cured by the touch of the king. So thousands of scrofulous children were brought to the king for cure.

Some of these children recovered or improved, because they were carried by their parents for days or even weeks from their homes all over England to London and so got fresh air and sunlight, which they never would have had otherwise.

But it wasn't the king's touch that cured them. King William of Orange, who, with his wife Mary, ruled England from 1688 to 1702, was the last English king who touched for the disease and evidently he had little faith in his ability to cure. To one man whom he touched he said, "God give you good health and better sense."

After Koch discovered the germ of tuberculosis in 1882, it was found that scrofula in the glands, lupus in the skin, and consumption in the lungs were all different forms of the same disease. For twenty years more, surgeons treated scrofula by removing the diseased, broken-down glands and draining the abscesses which had formed. This left ugly scars.

Tubercular glands in the neck were common in all hospitals, dispensaries and surgical clinics. Then it was found that this condition was caused by milk from tubercular cows. This danger could be removed by pasteurizing the milk.

Today, 95 per cent of the milk used in large cities is pasteurized. As soon as all the milk for our large cities was pasteurized, cases of gland tuberculosis began to decrease.

Then our national and state agricultural departments started a systematic fight against tuberculosis in cattle and the disease decreased still more. So now it is comparatively rare.

This is not only a good thing for the cattle, but it is also a better thing for our babies.

No tubercular cows, no tubercular milk. No raw milk, no gland tuberculosis in babies.

CHILDREN'S OPEN-AIR

BIBLE CLASSES

During the last six weeks the children of Ocean Beach School have had the opportunity of getting acquainted with the open-air Bible class system, a system which has been in operation for over four years in other parts of California.

The classes arranged in the San Diego area (beginning Jan. 12 and closing March 20) meet at the Ocean Beach schools, Thursdays and at the Point Loma school, La Playa, Fridays. The place of meeting is opposite the main entrance of the respective public schools and is designated at each place by a good-sized American flag. Any child is received into the classes who has obtained the parents' permission, and there are no fees or collections of any kind. The program of classes is so arranged that children may come direct upon their dismissal from school.

B. F. BEELER INJURED

IN AUTO COLLISION

While driving to town last Wednesday, B. F. Beeler, of 4175 Cape May street, was badly cut about the head in an automobile collision at India and Olive streets. According to reports to the police, Mr. Beeler brought his car to a stop and leaned his head out of the window to see if he had a flat tire. Lieut. C. F. Carr, United States navy, who was driving behind him, swerved to avoid the collision, but was unable to clear the auto ahead. Mr. Beeler's head was thrown forcibly against the window of his auto, which was broken by the impact, a jagged piece of glass entering the side of his head and severing an artery. Dr. E. H. Crabtree rendered first aid and took him to the Mercy Hospital for further treatment.

OUT OF THE UNKNOWN

"HELLO," said Denton, the city editor, past a cigar into the telephone.

"Could you tell me what sized hat Mr. Abe Glover wears?" asked a voice.

"You're up the wrong street. This is a newspaper office," replied the city editor, hanging up the receiver.

Again the telephone rang.

"Hello," said the city editor.

"Could you tell me what sized hat Mr. Abe Glover wears?" asked the voice.

"Say, are you a gramophone record?" snapped the city editor.

"Did you get back on this line? We've got a switch girl to protect us from freaks. Hello, switch."

"The young lady put me through to you at my request," said the voice.

"I should be glad if you could answer my question."

"What do you take us for? A public inquiry bureau, or a home for the mentally afflicted?"

"You make inquiries at your place, don't you?" the voice asked.

"Well, we have been known to," Denton agreed, "but we're not doing much in the hat-size line just now."

"I thought one of your men might take the trouble to ask while he is at Mr. Glover's house today," said the voice.

For the space of two seconds the city editor remained dumb. He was about to smash the receiver on again, when some instinct made him ask a further question.

"Which Mr. Glover are you talking about?" he said.

"Why, Abe Glover, of course."

"Do you mean the millionaire?"

"Sure. Your brains aren't very bright this afternoon. I want to know the size of the hat worn by the Mr. Abe Glover whose safe was cleaned out of jewels during the night."

It usually takes two railroad collisions and a royal assassination to make a city editor gasp, but Denton made an exception in this case. The information had come through upside down, and if Glover's jewels had gone a fortune had changed hands.

"That sounds like a big beat," he said into the instrument, "and I am sure we are very much obliged to you. Just hold the line a second."

He clapped his hand over the transmitter and turned to the man at his side.

"I've got a lost lunatic on this wire. Either he's fit for the madhouse or there's a providence watching over this office today. Fetch Curtis, quick. I expect I shall want both of you to tackle the story. Streak."

"Now," he added, in a suave voice, into the telephone, "you were saying the safe at Abe Glover's house had been emptied. The policeman on our beat doesn't seem to have got wind of it yet."

"He wouldn't," said the voice. "I guess he'd rather take poison than let it get into the papers."

"Did you hear exactly what had been stolen?"

"Bonds and diamonds chiefly, I believe," said the voice. "It was done thoroughly. There must be close on a hundred thousand dollars missing altogether."

The city editor turned to the two star reporters at his side and jabbed such facts as he had at them, adding a few instructions in staccato fashion.

"Don't forget to inquire about the size of Mr. Glover's hat, will you?" asked the voice, when the city editor turned his attention to the telephone again.

"Sure," replied Denton. "By the way, I'd be glad to have your name and anything else you know about this affair."

The line was as silent as the grave. While the two sleuths were making tracks for the palatial residence of Mr. Abe Glover with a scandalous disregard for the speed limit, Denton got busy on the telephone again, and here he received a blow. Yes, Mr. Glover was in. It was Mr. Glover speaking.

What? No, certainly not. His safe was perfectly intact, right under his very eyes.

On the face of things, the young cyclone that had burst in the office was panning out to nothing, and the city editor felt that he would like to hit somebody, but that was not the way he earned his living, so he sat tight, waiting for some tangible sign from his two sleuths. Twenty minutes passed and the city editor was beginning to wonder if news of any kind were going to break loose that day, when he heard Curtis cooling to him over the wire.

"It's a great yarn," said the reporter. "You can put the figure at a hundred thousand dollars easily, but don't die of shock when you hear what it cost us to square the butler. Old Glover has given a definite promise that he will fire anyone in his household who lets a word of it—"

"Yes, I know," snapped the city editor. "Come on with the facts."

And then Curtis proceeded to unburden himself of the story. The city editor was comparatively happy for a while because not only was this a clear beat that had dropped out of the skies during the dulllest day in months, but there were elements about it that lifted it far above the run of safe-breaking incidents.

Only a few minutes after this, Mr.

Glover narrowly escaped having an apoplectic fit when a paper was handed to him containing the news. The sum stolen was large, but he was a rich man. Indeed, he was colloquially said to be wallowing in wealth. He would willingly have sacrificed the money, however, rather than allow one tiny word of the affair to creep into the press, for Abe Glover was the sole proprietor of the establishment where the world-renowned Glover safes were manufactured, and the chief boast of the Glover safes was that they were utterly and eternally burglar proof.

"I'll put the law on you," bawled Abe at the city editor. "The whole thing's an infernal lie. If you don't come out with a contradiction in your next edition, I'll buy your little rag up and—and—"

"It isn't for sale, except at a cent a time, thanks, Mr. Glover," said Denton, perilously near wondering whether Curtis could really have slipped into some ghastly blunder.

"Who sprung this yarn on you?" fumed Abe.

"It's all over the city," replied Denton glibly.

Abe did not answer instantly. He was wondering whether, by any chance, his own lawyer, the only person to whom he had told the galling truth, could have been so indiscreet as to repeat the facts. Perhaps one of the lawyer's clerks had blurted it out. Shouting and raving had proved utterly ineffective.

"You understand," he said, at length, in a deadly calm voice, "if that apology doesn't appear in your next edition you'll feel a legal earthquake at your office."

"Curtis," said Denton, when the conversation closed there abruptly, "either this is your last day here, or you're going to have your salary raised, but it's more than mortal man can say which. I wonder who that lunatic was who put us on to it?"

"Lunatic nothing," cried Curtis, as an inspiration struck him. "I'll bet he never gave his name, or if he did give one it was a fake."

"Unreal it."

"It's as plain as the Statue of Liberty. Glover has two aspiring rivals in his field—Andrew Manning and the Manhattan Burglarproof Safe company. One of them has stumbled on the news and put us next to it because they knew it would stir their own trade up a bit. I'll bet a month's pay that is how it works out."

"According to your story, the burglar took everything worth having except a valuable diamond necklace which belonged to Glover's daughter. How do you account for that?"

"It is peculiar," said Curtis, "but it looks as though he had a scare while he was gathering the things up. There's a romance attached to that. The necklace was given to Miss Glover by Count Bayleau who has been stopping at Abe's guest for some days. The count is a French aristocrat, and Abe evidently thinks he has him roped in for the matrimonial stakes."

"Write it up, my son, write it up," urged the city editor. "You don't seem to realize that this is the only story we have today worth a cent. If Abe Glover is going to eat us for printing it, we may as well give him indigestion in the process."

Before the presses had been buzzing long, Glover's two rivals, greatly tickled by the joke, telephoned to the newspaper office for any unprinted trimmings to the story. The city editor played them cautiously, and after a while came to the conclusion that neither of them had been responsible for the news leaking out.

"I had a word with Mr. Glover just now," said the president of the Manhattan Burglarproof Safe company, "to tell him we felt sure he would be feeling sore, but the phone girl cut us off, saying that his language was damaging the electric current."

The afternoon was well advanced when the city editor heard a familiar voice over the wire and pricked up his ears. It was the lunatic speaking.

"Did you ask about that hat?" said the voice.

"Oh, yes. Six and seven-eighths," replied the city editor at random. "But why did you want to know?"

"Well, you see, I've got somebody else's hat and lost one that is an old favorite of mine. I'd give a lot to get my own back. Got a sort of attachment for it, see?"

"And you thought you had changed it at Mr. Glover's place, eh?" Denton asked, intent only on being courteous to the obliging lunatic.

"I did think so at first. I put mine on the Glovers' hall stand while I was emptying the safe, but as he wears a six and seven-eighths I suppose I must have changed it somewhere else, so I may find it after all."

"Curtis," said the city editor over his shoulder, in jerky fashion, "we'll have that story across three columns. There's an additional fact of some importance to add to it."

"I see," he added into the telephone. "You wouldn't care to complete your kindness by giving me your name, I suppose?"

"Certainly," said the voice. "I've been known in New York for ten days as Count Bayleau, but the real count is due to land here today, so I guess it's me for the simple life for a while."

"A sentimental burglar, eh?" said Denton. "You couldn't bring yourself to take the diamond necklace you had given to the girl?"

"That's right, except that it is only a bum imitation," agreed the voice with a chuckle that trailed off into the unknown.

"Tell the printer to set these headlines in that new big type," ordered the city editor as he began to write furiously. "This isn't a story. It's a blooming classic."

MOTHER LOVE WINS OUT IN DESPERATE BATTLE WITH SNOW

Blizzard Traps Family in Bleak Mountain Pass—Woman Goes for Aid.

Pagosa Springs, Colo.—Trapped for three days in a swirling blizzard near the crest of Wolf Creek pass, one of the most dangerous in Colorado, almost frozen, nearly exhausted by hunger and exposure, and the victim of thieves, the family of N. R. Stites of Oklahoma, including Mr. Stites, his wife and several children, were rescued and brought here only through the heroism of the wife and mother.

Despite the fact that Mrs. Stites battled her way for ten miles through almost impassable drifts and in the face of a howling blizzard, the aid she obtained from the ranch-house of Oscar McCoy almost came too late, for her four-year-old daughter was suffering from severely frozen hands and feet when brought here.

While Mrs. Stites was struggling through the huge drifts for aid and her husband was caring for the children and vainly trying to comfort them and keep the spark of life burning in their chilled bodies, thieves rifled the Stites' machine and stole their bedding, ax, shovel and other tools.

Stalled by Engine Trouble.

There was a hint of snow in the air when the Stites' machine, struggling up the sharp ascent of the pass, developed engine trouble and stalled.

In vain did Mr. Stites endeavor to repair the machine as his wife and family hovered near, lending what aid their inexperienced fingers could give.

Then the storm descended. Swirling gusts of snow first whipped through the pass, getting heavier as the snow began to form into drifts. Driven from his work on the car through the numbing cold, Mr. Stites was forced to abandon his attempt at making repairs and herded his family into the nearest shelter.

Night descended. The blizzard roared with increasing force. Morning came, but with it no lessening of the fury of the storm. One day passed. Cold and hunger brought whimpering from the children, and comforting words were all that the father and mother could offer.

Came a second night and a second day. The whimpering of the children had grown to fearful appeals for food and for warmth.

Mother Starts for Aid.

With the courage born of the danger to her loved ones, Mrs. Stites determined to make a desperate effort to obtain aid. Clasp her children to her breast for what might be the last time, she set off, alone, facing the deadly perils of the blizzard, plunging into the unknown.

Hours dragged by. Exhausted by hunger and her own exertions, she struggled through the drifts, sometimes falling, sometimes almost forced to relinquish her quest, but always there remained the thought of her loved ones. She went on.

At last she reached the ranch-house of McCoy and told in incoherent words her story.

Aid immediately was rushed to the husband and the children and they were brought here. A brother of Mr. Stites in Ophir was notified and he came here for the family.

Dream Wins Freedom.

London.—A dream has given Mrs. James Burrows of Eastbourne a divorce. While ill in a hospital she dreamed she saw a blonde woman in the life of her husband. So startled was she that she begged hospital authorities to let her "run home." They did, and she found a note which resulted in her locating her husband with a girl whom he called "his dream girl," Mrs. Burrows told the court.

Writer Laughs at Law to Regulate the Sexes

The law and custom may do their best to establish sex equality, but neither can hope to undo the work of a thousand centuries. Whatever statutes may have to say, men always will seem amusing to women and women always will seem queer to men.

When a woman is ill she wishes to be petted; when a man is ill he wishes to be left alone.

When a woman does wrong she can at once persuade herself that she was not to blame; when a man does wrong he condemns himself utterly, even though the greater part of the fault was another's. A woman is most at ease when she has on new garments; a man in new clothes feels hideously conspicuous, says the Baltimore Sun.

A man can kiss another woman and love his wife no less; when a woman enjoys kissing another man her husband is out of the picture.

A woman loves all the time; a man only at intervals.

A man pretends to know more than he does in an effort to impress his wife; a woman pretends to know less than she does to avoid hurt to her husband's vanity.

A man hates but little and shows the little clearly; a woman hates much and contrives to conceal it.

A woman hides her strength; a man hides his weakness.

A man forgives because he can't remember; a woman remembers because she can't forgive.

A woman is religious because she feels the need of a protector; a man is religious because he would co-operate with God.

Man is led by his appetite; woman is led by her curiosity.

Man will not change his mind, because he first must admit that he was wrong; woman changes hers for the sake of expediency even if she knows her first opinion was right.

Legislation can't take away a duck's love of water nor a chicken's aversion to it.

No Hypnotic Crimes

Assertions that crimes have been committed by one person at the hypnotic bidding of another must be relegated to the field of pure fiction, according to Doctor Delboeuf, a French physician, who has made a study of the subject of hypnotic influence.

Doctor Delboeuf tells of an experiment that seems to be conclusive. He had one man whom he frequently used as a subject, who could readily be persuaded, while in the hypnotic state, that a stick or bottle or any such object was a pistol, and on being commanded would "shoot" any other person with the mock weapon. But when a real revolver, which the subject in his conscious state had always known to be loaded, was placed in his hands, he would not pull the trigger, though he was hypnotized at the time and the weapon was empty. Doctor Delboeuf is of the opinion that naturally moral persons will not perform under the hypnotic state any acts that are inhibited by their conscious moral codes. He believes also, however, that a person of criminal tendencies might commit a crime while hypnotized, since the idea of crime is not repugnant to his conscious mind.

Superb Horsemanship

Riff horsemen, whose achievements in the war with Spain are frequently referred to in the newspapers, are the most daring riders in the world. When in full gallop they will throw their swords and matchlocks in the air, and catch them by the hilts or stocks without drawing rein.

Not long ago a war correspondent declared that he had seen a Riff rider thread a needle held by another rider, while racing full tilt across the sand!

Cossacks are fond of performing similar spectacular feats. One of their favorite tricks at gymkhanas is to snatch a child from its mother's arms, throw it into the air, catch it, and return it unharmed to its parents.

Indian riders of the Great Northwest will dismount while their steeds are galloping, pick up an object on the ground, and remount almost in the same instant.

Bird Not a Linguist

While employees of the California state board of control were gathering for work at Sacramento recently, a pretty parrot flew into the boardroom through an open window. It perched itself on the back of a chair and steadfastly refused to answer any question, even when solicited with a cracker.

Finally George Kelaydis, a Greek restaurant owner, appeared at the capitol to claim the bird, and incidentally revealed that the bird does not understand the English language; it speaks Greek only.

Sunday—Golf Day

Bishop Swint, on his way one beautiful autumn Sunday to preach in Wheeling, swept past golf course after golf course crowded with golf players.

Bishop Swint waved his hand towards one of these crowded golf courses and said with a grim smile:

"In the millennium, when every day will be Sunday, mankind will get surfeited with golf, and the game will then undoubtedly become extinct."

Joy for Curlers

One hundred and eighty pairs of Scottish curling stones are on their way to Canada. These stones are the gift of an enthusiastic Montreal courier, T. Howard Stewart, to fellow townsmen who are devotees of the game. This gift to the curlers of Montreal constitutes the greatest single order ever given for curling stones in the history of the game.

Question of Honor

"LOMA LORE"

CHAPTER XXVIII

IN '74

We had winter baseball fifty-one years ago. One of the most charming news entries of the Daily World of January 3, is this:

"The Coronadas and Lomas"

The match game of baseball between the Lomas and Coronadas on New Year's day was one of the most spirited and closely contested we have ever seen. Each club was sustained and encouraged throughout, notwithstanding the chilliness of the atmosphere, by large numbers of their lady friends. C. E. Atkinson acted as umpire and W. E. McKean as scorer. Following is the score of the game:

Lomas..... Outs 24 Runs 37
Coronadas..... Outs 24 Runs 56

We were defeated by nineteen home runs! But not ignominiously, however. We Lomas scammed in with thirty-seven—thirty-seven! Doesn't it take "Babe" Ruth the better part of an entire season to count his thirty-seventh home run?

About half past five o'clock on the evening of January 13, 1874 there was a wonderful mirage behind Point Loma. The clouds were so grouped as to suggest a forest-clad mountain with startling distinctness, the paper of the next day said. What has become of these other-day mirages off Point Loma? Has imagination dulled? Or have we no time to look upon sky scenery in these days?

In the account of a terrific storm that swept the river perilously close to the old palms at Old Town and into the bay as well as into False Bay, the fact that thousands of cubic yards of sand had been carried into the harbor is played upon with serious conviction that the government must soon take steps to control the course of the flood waters.

Lieutenant Weeden who was at work on the fortifications on Ballast Point, where Fort Rosecrans now stands, made a reconnaissance of the volume of the river with a view to reporting to the Engineer's Department and enforcing the recommendation towards obtaining an appropriation for turning the river.

"A singular feature," the account says, "was that immense quantities of fish were cast upon the Playa, principally herring and barracuda. Amongst these was one swordfish. Whether it was the pouring of the large stream of muddy water from the San Diego river into the bay that confused them we do not know. Incidents of this kind have been known to happen in the up country, particularly near Monterey. * * * The storm has already destroyed Lieut. Weeden's road to the fortifications. It was completely washed away, and access to his stables is prevented by a storm-improvised lake."

At this time there lived in San Diego a man named John Desmond whose business was the gathering, polishing and selling of shells. His chief gathering place was off the extreme end of Point Loma, on the tiny trip of beach, just below the "Spanish" lighthouse. Mr. Desmond also "dropped into verse," and his advertisements, week after week, carried long strings of quatrains, which while seeming at this distance to be the most insipid of doggerel, none the less contain so much good history, so many delightful hints at conditions as they then seemed to him, that we can forgive him his lack of devotion to technical perfection in verse-form and bless him for the trouble he gave brain and fist to produce these "poems." They may not be good poetry but, as Shakespeare puts it:

"Not marble, nor gilded monuments
Of princes, shall outlive this powerful rhyme * * *

Desmond's "Dream" and his "Third Dream" and his powerful if slovenly executed rhyme which has the "Spanish" lighthouse for its theme carry more information than many a column of the journales of the time.

CLAUS SPRECKELS HONORED

BY ST. RAILWAY OFFICIALS

AT ANNIVERSARY DINNER

In honor of the third anniversary of his appointment as vice-president and general manager of the San Diego Electric Railway Company, Claus Spreckels was complimented by the department heads of the Spreckels companies in San Diego, together with other employees of the affiliated concerns by a dinner last Monday night in the Silver Grill of Hotel del Coronado. Seventy members of the affiliated companies attended the affair, which was climaxed with the presentation of a handsome gift to the general manager of the street railway. Both Claus and John D. Spreckels responded briefly to the ovation given them.

IT PAYS TO MARKET BEEF OF QUALITY

It is condition and quality rather than weight that decide whether a steer is to be placed in the beef cattle classification. Within the class it is condition and quality that largely determine the amount of profit that goes to the shipper. Choice to prime steers bring from 75 cents to $5.75 per hundred weight over the common light stock, according to a study made of lightweight steers coming to the Chicago market by the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation.

The bulk of the shipments are classified under the grades of prime steers, 1,200 to 1,600 pounds; choice steers, 1,150 to 1,600 pounds; good steers, 1,150 to 1,600 pounds; medium steers, 1,100 to 1,400 pounds, and common rough steers, 900 to 1,200 pounds. These are the classifications of the United States Bureau of Markets.

Prime beef steers are the ideal type, combining exceptional breeding and thorough finishing. Short neck and short legs, smooth flesh and well-filled, bulging briskets are prerequisites. Prime beef steers are rare, even steers good enough to grade as choice are few. They show most of the characteristics of the prime grade, good breeding and long feeding, smooth flesh and thick fat. On the block the quality steer will show a good proportion of red meat covered with a modest amount of smooth white fat. The lean, while firm of texture, will be mellow to the touch. The carcass should carry down full to the hock, being highly marbled with bright lean of a fine grain.

"BILL" AND BEACH BOOZE

After an extended vacation "Bill" Lambert came back to San Diego last week and at once fell into the toils of the police when he tackled some county jail to await the dictum of the best (or, rather worst,) brands of beach booze. Sergeant George Churchman and Patrolman Mitchell curtailed "Bill's" proclivities for the wrong kind of wet goods by putting him into the local lock-up and later transferred him to the county jail to await the dictum of the court.
